Little Free Library

This is my first Little Free Library. It is on Elmerine Avenue where I live.

I learned about Little Free Libraries after going on vacation in Fayetteville, Arkansas where there were lots of them all over town.

When I returned home I learned that Little Free Libraries is an organization and movement to make sure communities have access to books. (www.littlefreelibrary.org)

I opened my Little Free Library on October 11, 2015 and everyone on my street really enjoys it. People have been borrowing books and several families have donated books.

I have four retired newspaper vending machines donated from Jefferson City News Tribune. I would like to partner with you to turn all four into Free Little Libraries and place them in areas of Jefferson City where kids and families do not have easy access to books. I really hope you consider supporting my volunteer project so we can make sure kids have access to books.
